

The Race Debate in America and Italy: Should We Do the Right Thing?

Ottorino Cappelli (June 13, 2008)

While Obama clinches the nomination, some Italian- Americans join in the Lee-Eastwood feud over racial prejudices in America. In Italy at the same time, the race issue surfaces in politics. How can we contribute?

In an op-ed just published on i-Italy, Maria Laurino [1] asks "Could a majority of Italian-Americans back the African-American presumptive Democratic nominee?"

Meanwhile Bill Dal Cerro [2], president of the Italic Institute of America [3], enters the Lee-Eastwood dispute over the portrayal of blacks in American cinema, by saying that "[Lee's] points about African-Americans are well taken, but, ironically, he does the same thing to Italians in his films."

At the same time, on the other side of the ocean, an outburst of racism in Italy [4] brings up the question: "Have Italians-in-Italy learned any lessons from the troubled story of their own migration?"

We are bound to see more of this over the next months, as a critically "colored" presidential election approaches in the U.S. and the race debate surfaces in Italian politics.

The result could be an old-fashioned, stereotyped, inter-ethnic polemic marred by reciprocal accusations; or it could be the occasion to push the debate about race and ethnicity in America and Italy to a new level. There is no better place than i-Italy to try and do the latter.

While we invite everybody to meet the challenge and do the right thing, here are a few reading suggestions from the net about the Lee-Eastwood dispute... and more.
